IT'S TIME FOR TEA!

[phone hangs up]

So, every week, my cousins and I sneak into our not-so-secret but feels-like-it grandparents' house. That hour feels like forever in their house, with big windows, twisty hallways, and stairs that make us feel like kings and queens.

There's everything there, and nobody's in a rush. We just wanna hang out and have a blast. Collecting memories, going on adventures, reading tons of books, telling funny stories, playing games, and munching on yummy biscuits that taste like hugs.

We explore. We dig and dig. And dig some more. Even the tiniest things become treasures, and when we peek in Nan's mirror, we turn into fancy ladies and gents from way, way, way back.

Oh, and that smell! Scones, fresh out of the oven, with jam and butter - it's like a yummy party in our noses. We just love tea time!

But wait!

Everybody knows Time for Tea means so much more than just drinking a cup of tea. Right?
